

Savings Bank Rates to Depositors

From the Bennington Banner.

It has been evident the past year that the savings bank and trust companies which could pay four per cent under the restrictive provisions of the state law held a decided advantage over their less fortunate brethren. Practically all the savings banks in Vermont have made a handsome gain in deposits, but where the banks have been able to advertise four per cent compound interest to depositors, the deposits have increased by leaps and bounds, as for instance Gov. Page's bank at Hyde Park which has gained $235,000, or almost a quarter of a million in deposits during the last six months of 1907.

A chance of a lifetime! On account of Gilbertson's orchestra being obliged to cancel its engagement of February 20 and having extra men hired for this date and also for the 21st, it gives the orchestra a chance to go to a dance Thursday evening, February 20, in the Woodmen's hall, Bolster block. This is the same orchestra that played for the hospital benefit. Now, if you danced after this music once, you will want to again; and if you never have, you surely will want to, for it is second to none. Now, remember, this is probably the only chance you will have this winter to hear this orchestra to its good advantage. RANDOLPH

W. F. Edson's Condition is Now Very Serious—Has Pneumonia.

W. F. Edson, who has been suffering from typhoid fever for weeks has now developed pneumonia and is very ill. Mr. Edson is not strong at his best and this fever left him in a weakened state, causing the results of pneumonia to be much feared.

Very high water was a feature of Saturday and serious loss was threatened for a time but at present the water is subsiding.

Mrs. Duprey of Barre is visiting her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Farnsworth, here for a few days. On her return home Mrs. Farnsworth will accompany her to remain for some time.

Elmer Bean's condition has remained about the same for the last two or three days without much perceptible gain. Miss Clara Bean of Barre, who is his sister, was here on Saturday and called upon him at the sanatorium.

The granddaughter of Mrs. Fabien Dupuis, Miss Morrill, is with her for a time, and will remain during Mrs. Dupuis's convalescence. Mr. Dupuis has so far recovered as to take up his duties at the foundry on Monday.

The cause for the low water in the reservoir has been discovered and the connection which was severed by a disarrangement of the pipe conveying the water from the spring has been adjusted and the danger of a water famine averted for the present.

A. W. Eastman was taken to the sanatorium on Saturday, ill with an attack of appendicitis, from which he has suffered several times before and threatened pneumonia. Mr. Eastman has the sympathy of the community, he having been off duty several times this season by repeated attacks of illness.

The decorations of the dining hall at the inn on the night of the board of trade banquet were of a high order. The work of H. M. Totman, the florist here, in town and the work did great credit to the decorator. Sweet peas and festoons of smilax graced the sides and edges of tables while the blooming plants of the primrose family adorned the top of tables, sideboards and other accessible places. The favors for each member and guest were dark red carnations.

S. A. Smith returned home on Saturday making the trip of seven miles from Bethel on foot. Mrs. S. A. Smith returned from Barre on Saturday, where she attended the Good Templars district meeting held there on Friday night. Other delegates from this lodge were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Budgett, George Emery and George Ford. At the next meeting of Arcadia lodge, to convene on Friday night, visitors from the Montpelier organization are to be present and assist in the initiatory ceremonies when several are to be admitted and the election of officers will follow.

CHELSEA

Misses Anna and Eva Lucas went Wednesday to East Randolph to visit their grandmother, Mrs. Arthur Camp.

Mrs. Elsie Lamberton of Sharon came the first of the week to visit her daughter, Mrs. Arthur W. Case, on Vershire street.

Philip J. Little of Leominster, Mass., came Tuesday night for a short visit to friends in town and is stopping at the Orange County hotel.

Clerence E. Simmons, who carried on the Charles Moulton farm on the West hill the past year, has gone to Boston, where he has employment.

Fred Merchant has rented the house in North Tunbridge near the Giles mill, recently vacated by Gilman Peavey, and has moved his family there.

Fred H. Stanton has purchased the Sophronia Ordway house on Maple avenue, for many years owned by the late Erastus Dugbee and wife. The consideration is said to have been $700.

J. K. Darling, who has been confined to the house for four weeks by a serious and obstinate attack of rheumatism, while still suffering from the affliction, has so far recovered as to be able to be at his office for a short time Friday afternoon.

Tuesday evening the members of the Tyrian club were invited to an "evening out" as the guest of "Ben" Tucker of Tunbridge, and the following gentlemen availed themselves of the opportunity of representing the fraternity in response to the courteous invitation of Mr. Tucker, who upon this occasion retained his established reputation of being a royal host, viz., E. A. Corwin, H. N. Mattison, Stanley C. Wilson, W. C. Holmes, William Robbins, Walter S. Goss and George A. Tracy.

The Lincoln day exercises at the town hall Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the graduating class of the academy, were instructive, entertaining and highly enjoyed. The recitations and tableaux by members of the class showed much care in preparation and an abundance of natural ability. Hon. Hale K. Darling's eulogistic address on the character and life of Abraham Lincoln, in which he called the attention of the young men and women especially to Lincoln's many noble deeds and traits of character that are worthy of emulation, as also the clarinet solo by Charles L. Denmore, with Mrs. W. H. Sprague as accompanist, were appreciated and enthusiastically received.

THE ODOR OF SANCITY.

A French Writer's Theory of How It May Be Eradicated by Man.

Dr. Georges Dumas is the author of an article in the Revue de Paris on "The Odor of Sanctity." The writer accepts as true the numerous reported instances of saints and mystics of the Catholic church whose bodies after death or during moments of ecstasy emitted peculiarly pleasing odors of various kinds. Then men and women with whom such legends deal, argues Dr. Dumas, were neuroathenes, and it is not impossible that the aroma of sanctity which surrounded them was the product of strictly physiological and chemical changes common to all men, but present in highly intensified form in subjects who, so to speak, burned up the candle of their existence at an unusually rapid rate. He says in part:

"So far, then, we have come across a great variety of perfumes—cinnamon, clove, orange, plum, rose, violet, lily of the valley, yellow amber and benzoin. Now, the natural constitution of all of these is well known, and chemistry produces them daily for commercial purposes. We may therefore substitute the equivalent chemical expressions for the ordinary terms we have employed and say that orange, cinnamon, violet and musk owe their perfume to aldehydes and acetones, aromatic liquids derived from the alcohol, just as the artificial essence of pineapple comes from butyric ether. We have, then, to ask whether the human body can produce odorous compounds of the kind we have mentioned and under what conditions. As a matter of fact, it does produce a certain number of such compounds in the destruction of organic matter, which is the constant condition of life, in particular acetones and the volatile fatty acids, butyric, formic, acetic, etc. If the process of combustion is normal all these constituents are burned up, completely oxidized, and give as a residue water, carbonic acid and urea. But let some slackening occur in the most nutritious of the tissues and the same constituents will escape through the breath, perspiration and the skin."

MAGIC MIRRORS.

Peculiar Effects in Some of the Polished Bronze Reflectors.

Now and then mirrors of a curious kind are seen in Europe. They are called "magic mirrors" and are of Japanese origin, made not of glass silvered, but of cast bronze, polished on the face and bearing on the back raised patterns, inscriptions, symbolical designs, crests or pictures. When exposed to a bright beam of light from the sun or from an electric lamp they reflect in the light from their polished face the image of the pattern on their backs.

This is a purely optical property and has of course nothing in common with the fortune telling magic crystals of the astrologer or the alleged magic mirrors of necromancy, yet it long puzzled the scientific optician and even now is little known or believed. The researches of various scientific men have established the fact that the phenomenon is due to very minute differences of curvature in the polished face, differences so minute that they do not affect the ordinary use of the mirror as a looking glass and that can be detected only by delicate optical tests.

The daily remaining mystery has been as to how these delicate differences of curvature were produced in exact correspondence to the pattern on the back. The makers themselves are often in ignorance of the magic property and do not know which of their mirrors possess it and which do not. The mirrors are cast in molds and afterward polished by hand, and it is held by scientific men that the difference of curvature is caused by the metal's yielding unequally under that pressure of the tools used in scraping and polishing, the thin parts naturally bending more than the thick. This accounts for the mirrors' becoming magic.—Chicago News.

PEACE OF PITTSBURGH

Real Meaning of the Quiescent State of Labor.

Workers in the Steel Industry Accused of Servility—Lacking in the Spirit Which Distinguishes Robust American Manhood.

Each issue of American Industries contains articles picturing in the most favorable light different communities where nonunion conditions prevail, says the Typographical Journal. One of the most recent is a story which asserts that Pittsburgh is acknowledged as the "scene of the greatest liberty of the open shop." Part of the statement reads:

"The population of Greater Pittsburgh alone is now estimated at more than 500,000. To this must be added an equal number in the circumvallated area, making a total of more than 1,000,000 souls who are engaged, most of them directly, in industrial production. Out of this total it is estimated that at least 250,000 are wage earners. At least 150,000 are employed in the iron and steel industry, and not more than 2,000 are members of labor unions. It is a most astounding fact that at the same time within this area of active production of wealth, this focus of aggregation of all materials and center of distribution of finished products, where the assertions of organized labor might in theory be expected to be most aggressive, they are in reality most quiescent."

The above statement may or may not be true, but if it is it affords much food for thought. Twenty years ago the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers was probably the most highly organized and powerful trades union in the world, and its passing from perfect organization to perfect quiescence under enforced disunion marks a transition in sentiment and action in the steel industry of such scope and meaning as to weaken our faith in facts deemed fixed and fundamental in human nature. A writer in one of the leading newspapers takes this view of the conditions said to exist:

"When General Snowden, with his 7,000 soldiers, appeared at Homestead it could be foreseen that the right of the steel worker to co-operate with his fellows and confer with his employer in the matter of wages was to be denied, at least for a time, but it could not be foreseen that in a few short years the American would either give place to or take on the servile attitude of the Hunyak. And yet he has done both of these things, and that, in my opinion, is exactly what is meant by this 'most quiescent' period in the history of steelmaking in the United States.

"The peace of Pittsburgh means more than mere quietude. Any one who has been in the district knows that it means that the tollers in this great industry have learned to touch their caps in trucking allegiance to the man who gives them work. It means the disappearance of American homes, the disappearance of robust American manhood and the extinction of that fighting spirit which successfully resisted the aggressions of King George and his ministers, which created a government of the people and gave it a place of commanding power among the nations of the earth.

"I do not say that the Pittsburgh steel workers are slaves, because there have been slaves whose souls were never in thrall, but I charge them with unmurmuring subservience, a gradation of degradation which does not necessarily adhere to the victim of involuntary servitude."

FAVOR LABOR LAWS.

Contract Does Not Always Protect the Worker, Say Economists.

At a joint session of the American Economic association and the American Association for Labor Legislation held recently at Madison, Wis., the president of the latter organization, Dr. Richard T. Ely of the University of Wisconsin, spoke on "Economic Theory and Labor Legislation," saying in part:

"An examination of modern theories of population and wages reveals the existence of no doctrine which in itself is antagonistic to labor legislation in itself, and as a matter of fact it would be difficult to find such antagonism among the leading economists of the world today.

"The economic grounds for labor legislation are revealed best when the subject is approached from the viewpoint of contract or the economic bargain consideration, particularly in its legal aspect with respect to underlying economic causes.

"Contracts are static, not dynamic. Through contract the actually existing economic forces manifest themselves with all their inequalities and injustices.

"Until recently economists were inclined to limit regulation of labor conditions and especially hours of toil to children, young persons and women, leaving adult men 'free' to make their own contracts, but experience has shown that, while the adult males as a rule are in a far better position in the labor contract than the other classes mentioned, unregulated contract does not always conduce to freedom and fair opportunity, but frequently means bondage and degradation. We must not take the view of the state as external stepping in and interfering with the liberty. Its action is rather the result of the co-operative efforts of men to determine the conditions of toil and enlarge the sphere of economic action.

"Science can draw no arbitrary line between labor legislation for adults and labor legislation for women and children. Cases must be judged as they arise on their merits. Efficiency must be an ever present test."

MEN OF EARLIER AGES.

Were They the Mental Peers of the Men of Today?

The general idea that our enormous advances in science and command over nature serve as demonstrations of our mental superiority to the men of earlier ages is totally unfounded. The evidence of history and of the earliest monuments alike goes to indicate that our intellectual and moral nature has not advanced in any perceptible degree. In the second place, we find that the supposed great mental inferiority of savages is equally unfounded. The more they are sympathetically studied the more they are found to resemble ourselves in their inherent intellectual powers.

Even the so long despised Australian savages, almost the lowest in material progress, yet show by their complex language, their social regulations and often by an innate nobility of character indications of a very similar inner nature to our own. If they possess fewer philosophers and moralists, they are also free from so large a proportion of unbalanced minds—idiots and lunatics—as we possess. On the other hand, we find in the higher Pacific types men who, though savages as regards material progress, are yet generally admitted to be physically, in intellectually and morally our equals, if not our superiors. * * * Thirdly, we have no proof whatever that even the men of the stone age were mentally or morally inferior to ourselves.—Alfred Russel Wallace in Fortnightly Review.

A Curious Grace.
The most curious form, or, rather, expression, of grace after meat which I have ever come across was that customary at Clifford's inn, one of the vanished inns of chancery. The society consisted of two distinct bodies, the principal and rules and the Kentish mess, each body having its own table. At the conclusion of the dinner the chairman of the Kentish mess, first bowing to the principal of the inn, took from the hands of the servant some small rolls or loaves of bread and, without saying a word, dashed them several times on the table, after which they were taken away. Solemn silence reigned only by the thumps prevailed during this curious substitute for a verbal grace.—Cor. London Chronicle.
